

University College Day 2012

Did you know that, every year, Texas Wesleyan University hosts a university-wide event celebrating the many scholarly and creative endeavors of the campus community? This event is called University College Day, and whether you have been with Texas Wesleyan for one year or decades, we want your input for the future.

As we approach University College Day 2011, we would like to invite you to take a survey that will help us create a university-wide vision for this event.

The University College Day planning committee will use your feedback to increase student participation, faculty-and-student collaboration, and scholarly endeavors on campus.

Your ideas are valuable to us. Thank you for taking a few minutes to answer the following 5 questions.

1. In order to ensure variety of topics, we are considering listing topic areas in the 2012 program. Students would select a category when they submit their proposal. What are your thoughts, and what categories would you like to see on the program?

2. Each year we have a keynote speaker. Please share with us your powerful networks by sending names of potential speakers for 2012 and beyond. Consider people you know, speakers you have heard at conferences, and interesting colleagues across the world. Type contact information here (this survey is anonymous, so if you want to be contacted, provide your own information as well):

University College Day 2012

3. This year's UCD theme is "Connecting the World and the Community." What theme and title would you suggest for University College Day 2012?

4. In light of your ideas about the direction of University College Day, do you have any suggestions for the possible name change, so it would better reflect the mission and vision of the event?

5. What would motivate you to present and/or attend sessions with your students? In other words, what needs to happen for you to be more invested in this event?